Summary of reasons for decision:

The film was made as part of the 2016 Roxy5 Short Film Competition, and is to be screened at the 2019 National Arts Festival's Young and Cinematic Programme. It is a light-hearted amateur short film made by school students about all of the fish and chips in Tawa going missing. The film does not deal with any matters of concern to the Films, Videos, and Publications Classification Act 1993, and is therefore is classified as suitable for general audiences. The classification given to this film is consistent with the right to freedom of expression provided for by the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990.
